

KPMG launches service to help SMEs with cyber security

KPMG Enterprise has launched a cyber security service which it says is tailored to the needs and resources of smaller and mid-tier businesses.

“The government is increasingly considering failure to protect customer data to be a public interest breach and the Information Commissioner’s Office (ICO) is fining organisations up to £500,000 for breaching the Data Protection Act. Suffering a customer data loss can trigger an ICO investigation, risking a financial penalty that can really hurt a smaller business,” said Del Heppenstall, head of KPMG’s cyber security practice.
